Preface

Since the collapse of the Third Reich to the present era: organized, competent, and most importantly, effective white resistance has been all but non-existent. The failures of democracy and capitalism have resulted in the cultural and racial displacement of the white race, yet what meaningful resistance has arisen from it? We wish to appeal to the radical in this struggle, as it is the radical that etches their place into history. Lead a life worthy of remembrance, to us an accident would be to die in bed.

Part 1: Organization

Assuming all federal, state, and local functions of the System were to collapse tomorrow, what then? Often, the most staunch believers in the inevitability of System collapse are the least prepared to effectively act if and when that comes to pass. We seek System collapse because absent full or partial breakdown of System authority in a given area, projecting our power onto it is extremely difficult or impossible.

Many white nationalists correctly point out that society is a collective function of its individual members, just as your body is a function of the cells that constitute it. Without cooperation and a cohesive relationship with the smaller units, the larger one cannot operate. However, they seem to disregard this principle when it comes to organizing and training with their own comrades. The main obstacle to organization is fear and paranoia. The cure is time spent familiarizing and forming relationships with potential comrades. This can only be done if there is some sort of initial engagement to get the clock ticking. Absent this, we are effectively atomized and prevented from choosing our future as a race full stop.

The first prerequisite is manpower. As a wise man once said, power comes from the barrel of a gun. Without boots on the ground, all we have is discussions in online chatrooms. System collapse or not, this will get us the same result every time: failure. At no point in human history has there been an absence of some sort of societal authority, save for very short periods of natural disasters and war. Immediately following the collapse of System authority in a region, we would have to contend with armed gangs (which are often highly organized), various militias (such as 3 Percenters and Oath Keepers), as well as radical leftist organizations such as Antifa. 50-100 trained and organized group members is a rough starting point to effectively contend with these entities in a given region.

Second is proximity: each member should be ready and able to respond with action to any area within the occupied territory in under 2 hours. This area would roughly be the size of Connecticut. Absent this speed of response, retaining authority becomes unsustainable as better coordinated entities will quickly take advantage of your overextension and overwhelm your forces.

Third comes civilian terrain: records show that in the Chinese Communist Revolution, the Taliban insurgency in Afghanistan, and the Irish war of Independence; a minimum ratio of 1:1000 soldiers to civilians is necessary to hold territory. This means that for every 1,000 civilian inhabitants of an area, a minimum of 1 occupying soldier is necessary.

Physical terrain should work in favor of the home team, and mountainous terrain has always been the first choice of any defensive (especially irregular) force. Absent this, heavily forested terrain is advisable, but ideally your area of operations has both.

If this sounds fantastical, consider that with a population of 330 million, only 600,000 full time police officers in the US are required to project total system authority onto land the size of a continent. Leaving us with a ratio of roughly 1:600. In the case of favorable civilian demographics (>90% white) and advantageous terrain (mountainous and/or heavily forested), it doesn't take much imagination to see the ratio of 1:1000 being more than sustainable.

Part 2: Separatism

Since the fall of the Soviet Union, the military and intelligence industrial complex has shifted to targeting radical Islam, and now what the System broadly perceives as white nationalism. If one recently awoke from a coma, you would be forgiven for thinking there was some kind of widespread white insurgency. As media and system actors declare all out war on whites after even the slightest hint of resistance.

Likewise, totally apolitical things - homeschooling, honors classes in public schools, strong and healthy families, basic standards of human decency and behavior - are attacked as "racist" and "encouraging white supremacy". Why? Because such activities allow whites to thrive and achieve our full potential. This isn't political. THIS WAR IS EXPLICITLY RACIAL. When viciously attacked by an enemy determined to kill you, there is no rolling over and making peace. THERE IS NO PEACE TO BE MADE. When the broken and corrupt system has been subverted and infiltrated by our enemies on every level, and is now being weaponized against us, the system cannot save us. THERE IS NO DEMOCRATIC SOLUTION.

To quote a great man, "there is but one choice: survive or perish." And in this hour of to be or not to be for the future of our people, conflating "the system MUST collapse" with "the system WILL collapse", is more dangerous than any amount of threats and oppression by our enemies. Indeed, the system may very well collapse, but anyone aware of the demographic trends in this country should know that by then it will be too late. Rome is a popular example of the collapse of empires, yet any student of history will tell you that waiting for its collapse didn't work out too well for the Gauls. Truly, waiting for a regime that is engaged in the wholesale brainwashing, slavery, exploitation, and total annihilation of your people to collapse a millenia from today can be considered the most cowardly form of existence there ever was. This, we saw in Rome, and we have no reason at the present time to believe that at the height of the American empire, history will judge us any differently. No excuse for our failure will have any meaning, for there will only be a swarming horde of indifferent, mulatto zombies to hear it. There will be no white men to remember us: either to blame us for our weakness, or to forgive us for our folly.

If we fail, God's great experiment will come to an end, and this planet will once again, as it did millions of years ago, move through the ether devoid of higher life. To avoid this fate, and carve out a future basis of existence for posterity, we must exploit another function of the rise and fall of empires; that is, long before the last strongholds of the System come crashing down, the System will become unable or unwilling to adequately defend the outer reaches of its empire. This does not presume lawlessness and chaos spontaneously descending in random counties across North America, but the fact that at some point in time the System will become too preoccupied in major cities and places of strategic significance to send the National Guard and federal agencies into say, rural Idaho or Alaska.

This will be achieved via utilizing an underground and decentralized cell structure of guerrilla fighters. Note "decentralized" and not "independent". The 3 possible configurations of any sort of armed resistance can be said to be centralized, decentralized, and independent.

A centralized structure is that of any conventional military or paramilitary force, and entails a clear chain of command, overt courses of offensive action, and lateral communication with allied units. A decentralized cell structure consists of units of organization soldiers that primarily exist and operate on a local level, with interaction occurring primarily only between members of said local unit. This ensures that all activity is kept strictly on a "need to know" basis, and also considerably reduces collateral damage if any individual cell is infiltrated or compromised. As this will not affect the operational security of other units. In a decentralized organizational structure, there will however be maintained a route of communication with a central entity that also maintains correspondence with other autonomous units, a “revolutionary command”, so to speak. This way, if cooperation, reinforcement, or geographical shifts are necessary between units, the organization as a whole will not be atomized without any further courses of action being rendered logistically impossible.

Finally, independent cells would be units that operate entirely devoid of contact with others in any form or capacity. While this “lone wolf” approach has been advocated by many due to its illusive view of being safe from infiltration, it is entirely impractical for projecting power on a regional level, much less impacting the world-historical fate of our people. No successful revolution has ever been carried out by lone wolves, because proper cohesion and communication is essential for any and all military operations, especially those without the upper hand. Aside from the impracticality of conducting successful operations on a technical level, there must be some organizational authority to make demands to the System, and eventually receive territorial concessions. As anyone that has been around long enough in this movement will tell you, the level of infighting oftentimes prevalent will decapitate and paralyze any level of resistance full stop before the System fires a shot. That is, without a proper and competent authority to direct the macro level of organizational action.

As with any guerrilla war, the goal is not to defeat the enemy on the battlefield, but to make them unable or unwilling to continue the fight. Why fight F-16s when you can destroy the enemy’s fuel supply lines? Why deal with a tank when you can blow up bridges and blockade roads? Why engage the enemy on their terms when you can ambush them as they camp? The speed and freedom to operate that guerrillas enjoy is a force multiplier that allows them to contend with numerically and technologically superior forces. The conventional army loses if it does not win. The guerrilla wins if he does not lose. The American empire wasn’t able to succeed in Vietnam or Afghanistan, and if we possess the same dedication and resolve, there is no reason we can't do the same.

The goal of the organization is to carve out a domain of territory for us to eventually directly administer. Since the System will be unable or unwilling to hold onto pieces of territory deemed less strategically significant, or geographically distant from its core cities, sooner than say, Los Angeles or Washington D.C, it resolves that we concentrate our campaign in regions more likely to be conceded after the culmination of a guerrilla campaign. If this goal sounds impossible, keep in mind that going up against the System in its entirety is infinitely more so. Our goal is not to liberate the hordes of human filth residing in Detroit or New York City, but to establish an independent homeland for our descendants to live.

As long as the government is able to keep the economy somehow gasping and wheezing along, the people can be conditioned to accept any outrage. Despite the continuing inflation and gradually declining standards of living, most Americans are still able to keep their bellies full today, and we must accept the fact that this is really all that counts for most of them. A relative state of comfort, under which Organization sympathizers can feel isolated from the wider consequences of System oppression, is one unfavorable to those seeking to foster a revolutionary climate. The more things are "business as usual", the less freedom guerrillas are permitted to operate with, and the results of their actions are less likely to be felt on a macro level. To play the cards we are dealt, the Organization must then employ a "spectrum of resistance", roughly confluent with the overall trends of societal breakdown.

The goal of this spectrum of resistance is to gradually break down the inhibitions of white resistance, normalize open political violence on both sides, and to eventually foster an atmosphere cohesive to open revolutionary acts against the System. Just as the chaos of war permits all kinds of acts generally impossible in normal life, this increase of conflict and normalization of political violence in the public eye will contribute to the eventual realization of an asymmetric war against the System. Once one stage is started, it is not assumed that the previous stage becomes unnecessary. Rather they should be used as building blocks to contribute to the atmosphere we seek to create.

Stage 1 is online propaganda and IRL postering. The goal of this stage is threefold.

1. To further radicalize potential Organization sympathizers and future members.
2. To further accelerate the polarization of society among political & racial lines.
3. To direct the feelings of discontent and alienation among our sympathizers into something productive, namely giving them a way to network with like minded comrades in order to train and organize together.

Stage 2 is "peaceful" demonstrations, such as traditional street marches, banner drops, and documented militant training sessions. The internal goal of this stage is to get comrades active with each other in real life, and getting them comfortable working together when they will be exposed to the general public. Externally, these demonstrations will (like Stage 1) continue to break down social inhibitions of potential white resistance fighters and propagandize our brand into something positive, as well as further stimulate backlash from our enemies, creating a feedback loop of anti-white repression and counter acts of resistance.

Stage 3 is non-lethal kinetic attacks & property damage . This can take the form of rioting, arson, etc. but also coordinated acts against System targets such as roads, railways, communications, power stations, food supplies, and so on. If civilian or military casualties are possible, an evacuation warning should be sent ahead of time

Stage 4 is lethal kinetic attacks. This includes assassination of System figureheads and functionaries, ambushing military targets, and bombings of infrastructure where civilian or military casualties are probable.

The Organization needs feasible and practical aims which it can demand from the System every time an action is successfully undertaken: with these aims being understood as some of the things the organization is fighting for. These aims have to be specific, as they could in theory be conceded by the government. One such aim is to demand that the government make a public denunciation of the holocaust lie. Another is to demand the right of whites to educate their children in white only schools.

Another is to demand that political prisoners be released from captivity. The primary aim for which the Organization is fighting, and which all such similar organizations' individuals are fighting for, is an independent white homeland where we can live among our own kind, in peace, and according to our own natural laws and customs. This primary aim has to be made known every time an action is successfully undertaken.

When power is achieved, and our first great struggle is over; then war will be eternal. We will conquer the Earth, and take our rightful place as its masters. Then we will continue to conquer. We will create an Aryan civilization, a free universe, a realm where all men in existence are the masters of their own fate. We will build a new man, a civilized man that still bears the bloody heart of a barbarian. Some will talk of how we are bound to fail, but they can suck on the barrels of our guns. Our children will be godmen. They will be unfit to survive in our future; those people who saw fit to complain and write 'blogs' while a revolution transpired outside their windows. There is a long struggle ahead of us, a struggle for the future of the Earth. What greater joy could there be, than for you, and your children, and your children's children, to forever hold that future in the palm of their hands? To shape it, and for the mark of that to remain scorched onto the surface, embedded in the gentle streams and high peaks, in the very soul of existence, as the names of the heroes that came before us live today in sculpture and in mannerism. We will have become destiny. We will have become eternity.
